The newspapers ... the liberal party have greatly erred in their estimate. They had expected ... gains here and throughout the kingdom.

NATIONAL NOTES.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning the Manufacture of American Paper Money.

United States notes are printed on paper made in Dalton, a small town in Massachusetts, and each blank sheet of the peculiar paper used is guarded almost as carefully as if it were already printed and signed. The mill in which it is made is one of the oldest in the country, having been established in colonial times. The gray silk pulp which is the embryo form of the paper passes between heavy rollers, and, as it moves along, bits of blue and red silk thread are scattered over the surface. From the pulp-room to the vaults in which it is stored until it is sent to Washington it is jealously watched. It is carried to Washington in small iron safes, ... those used by the express companies, and ... it is kept in the treasury vaults for years, until it is needed. The mere possession of any of this paper by an unauthorized person is a felony. More than a thousand persons are employed in the bureau of engraving and printing, at wetting, plate-printing, examining, pressing, numbering, binding and engraving. The bank-note plates and stamp dies are kept in vaults that can only be opened by the joint labor of three men, and each opening takes more than fifteen minutes. All the presidents except the present one have been portrayed on the bank notes, and 3 vice presidents, 14 secretaries of the treasury, ... secretaries of state, 6 secretaries of war, and 3 postmasters general and chief justices, besides 25 senators and representatives, and several persons distinguished in science and literature. The highest value in national bank notes is $1000. The printing of a bank-note requires from 22 to 24 days, and during the process it passes through the hands of 52 persons. The highest denomination of the legal-tender notes is $10,000. There are also $5000, $1000 and $500 notes. During the last year there were printed by the government $16,000,000 worth of legal-tender notes, $63,000,000 of national bank currency, $5,300,000 of bonds, $38,000,000 of silver certificates and 684,... stamps ...

THE JURY FIXERS.

The fact that Wells put that in his report looks as if the thing got them out of the case ... he would put it at ... the charges against Dickson, Col. Ingersoll says Bowen is not to be relied on at all, and the department of justice alternately repudiates him and offered him as a truthful witness. The other charge on which Dickson was arrested was that of Juror McNeely, that he violated the instructions of the court and told the jury a statement of Bowen's attempt at bribery. The colonel justifies him fully in doing this. Judge Wylie made some remarks about jury bribery that were calculated to give the impression that the defendants were acting corruptly. In view of that fact only Dickson should let his fellow jurors know the government had been trying to influence him. That Dickson should have tried to get a personal interview with his attorney general and that Bowen should undertake to arrange an interview strikes the ...

DICKSON'S ... TO THE ...

The grand jury came into the criminal court this morning with a number of indictments, and, ... after going through the form of presenting them, placed the following communication in the hands of Justice Wylie:

Washington, Oct. 28.

T. F. S. Hutchinson, Esq., foreman of the grand jury. Sir: I was drawn as a juror in the regular panel of the March term of the criminal court, and at the sacrifice of my business interests and personal health reluctantly accepted the service and faithfully performed the ... necessarily assigned me until the end of the term.

In June the star route case came on for trial, and notwithstanding my earnest protest I was accepted, and sworn as a juror to try the case upon the law and evidence. During the progress of the trial I was approached by an agent of the department of justice named Henry A. Bowen, who represented to me that he was authorized to see me in reference to the case. He made me a dishonest proposition, offering to pay $25,000 to influence the verdict. The following day, August 24th, he forwarded a card to my address asking an appointment. I immediately reported the transaction to Judge Wylie and informed him what had transpired. The ... of that character ... affects the rights ... of citizens and is of such importance that I ... fully but earnestly request that your honorable body should investigate the charge and that I may be summoned before you to present these facts, supported by corroborating proof. I am, sir, respectfully yours,

WM. DICKSON.

... CENSURE.

His honor read the paper through twice, and turning to the foreman said sharply:

"Did you say that the grand jury received this paper?"

"Yes, sir," he answered.

"Do you know by whom it was written?"

"Nothing more than that it was received."

"It is a highly improper communication," said the judge, "and you should take notice of it. It is a paper coming from a party who insists on being brought before you for the purpose of vindicating himself. We have no official knowledge as to who signed it. The court will direct the clerk to file the paper in open court and that a writ issue to the person whose name appears to have been written to the paper to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt."

"When shall the writ be returnable?" asked the clerk.

"To-morrow morning at 10 o'clock," sharply answered the judge.

The jury then retired. The regular business of the court was resumed, but the introduction of the letter and the action of the court created quite a sensation.

Hay was a good crop, too, the yield being enormous and the price the highest for a long period. Fruit and vegetables never turned out better, dairy products were most generous, while we all know what hops have been to ... One farmer gave us his experience last evening. He had been unfortunate for a lengthy period, and was broke. In November last he took up a claim on the upper White river and applied himself diligently to its cultivation and general improvement. SUPREME COURT.

Salem, Oct. 31.

Court met at 10 A. M. Full bench present.

Van B. DeLashmutt, respondent, vs. John Sewood, appellant. Judgment of the circuit court affirmed. Opinion by Watson, C. J.

SYLLABUS.

1. Possession taken by a mortgagee with the mortgagor's consent, after foreclosure and a sale of the mortgaged premises and execution of a sheriff's deed to the former as a purchaser at the sale, does not constitute him a mortgagee in possession with the right to retain the same until his debt is paid. The consent of the mortgagor given after being thus divested of all interest in and control over the property, is simply a nullity.

2. The omission to enter the names of all the judgment debtors under the proper heading in the judgment docket, does not prevent the judgment from becoming a lien on the real property of those whose names are properly entered in such docket.

3. Any mark commonly understood, and ordinarily employed in business transactions, to denote the division between figures representing dollars and cents, is sufficient for the purpose in judicial records or other official documents. Of this character are the lines and spaces in the ruled money columns of regular books of account, or official records similarly prepared.

4. The foreclosure of a prior mortgage for upon real property without making a subsequent judgment creditor a party, in no wise affects the rights of the latter, and a sale under his judgment conveys the legal title to the purchaser, notwithstanding the fact of a previous sale of the same premises having taken place under the decree of foreclosure.

5. The rights of the purchaser under such sale, respectively, are not affected by proceedings in bankruptcy against the mortgagor and judgment debtor, commenced over a year after the lien of each lien attached and the ... and the assignee in bankruptcy has not intervened, either to redeem the premises or oppose the enforcement of such liens, or have the ... in the court ... which the bankruptcy proceeding is pending.

6. A tax roll, although in great ... offered in evidence by a party, together with the assessment and delinquent tax roll upon which it is based, and which disclose a state of facts which demonstrate its invalidity, is properly rejected by the court.

7. Where, at a trial by a jury, the evidence for the defendant is admitted, and plaintiff establishes a prima facie case upon documentary evidence, whose effect, as well as admissibility, is a proper subject for the determination of the court, an instruction to the jury to return a verdict for the plaintiff is both correct and proper.

Henry L. Hennecky vs. Jennings Smith; argued and submitted.

Court adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The New Senator.

Union Sentinel, Dem.

Hon. J. N. Dolph, who drew the prize in the senatorial lottery at Salem a few days ago, is so well known to Oregonians generally as to require no introduction at our hands. As a politician Mr. Dolph is a republican, and one, we believe, who has always endorsed everything his party has done from Grant, Ism and the electoral commission down to the bottom of the list. But while Mr. Dolph has always been recognized as one of the leaders of his party, a position to which he seems to have been naturally assigned by its members, by reason of his acknowledged ability, he has not been known as one who has made politics a profession—has not been a place hunter in his party. As a lawyer, Mr. Dolph stands at the head of the profession in the state, and as a far-seeing and enterprising business man, he is one of Portland's most remarkably successful citizens, and by his close attention to business and his wonderful physical and mental ability to transact a large amount of business in a short space of time, has amassed a handsome competency within a few years. It will be urged against him by the democratic press throughout the state generally that he is vice president of the O. R. & N. Co. and a monopolist, and a friend to monopolists, and that in this respect, in his election the people have gained nothing over the election of Mitchell. Whether the objection be worthy of public attention, Mr. Dolph's actions hereafter, alone, will be the better answer. One thing can be said of him at least, his private character is such that Oregonians need not blush when the name of their senator is mentioned, and we cheerfully concede that, if we must have a republican senator, we are willing to accept Hon. J. N. Dolph.

A certain English major on sick leave from South Africa applied to go to Egypt on active service. "You are not well enough," said the horse guards. The major at once produced a medical certificate to the effect that he was quite fit for duty. He was accordingly promptly ordered back to his corps.

During the chartist demonstration in 1848, it was feared that an attack would be made upon the Bank of England, and considerable preparations for a strong defense were made. The roof was fortified, a strong garrison was placed within, and the ancient door way was closed and completely built up. The doorway is about to be reopened in order to facilitate the vast business of the bank.

The New York silk exchange is to establish a colony for the cultivation of silk in New Jersey. It has not yet been fully determined where this will be done, but it will be within twenty-five miles of New York city. Six families, composed with the exception entirely of women, who have been teachers in the public schools, have already expressed their intention of joining the colony.

Forty-two of the most important lighthouses on the French coast will, it is declared, be lighted by electricity. To equip them with this system will entail a cost of $1,600,000, which is to be spread over eight years. For immediate expenditure 30,000 has been voted, and it is expected that next year a demand will be made in the chamber for $140,000. The house of Cane Grimaldi, between Calais and Boulogne, will be the first taken in hand.

A Cause for Suicide.

One of the youngest suicides in the history of crime was Maurice Barrow, age ten, who deliberately hanged himself last month at the Home Industrial school, Feltham, England. He was not driven to desperation by outrageous ill-treatment, but on the contrary came to the conclusion that life was not worth living because the labor master prevented him from bursting a frog which he had inflated with a blowpipe. The jury found that he hanged himself while of sound mind. "What," said the coroner, "a felo-de-se," and so the verdict was recorded.

A St. Louis observer has discovered that the cause of a man's death, as reported by his physician, will indicate the financial standing of the man when living. When a poor man dies on account of having drunk too much whisky the physician registered it as "drunkenness," or "alcoholism," but if the deceased was a rich man the doctor calls it "nervous prostration," "dipsomania," "general debility," "gastric trouble," "cirrhosis," or "dyspepsia." If he is only moderately wealthy a man is likely to get "delirium tremens," or "gin in his gizzard." The moral is that it is better for a man to die rich.

A DEMAND FOR CLASS RECOGNITION.

The colored people of Rhode Island appear to be imbued with a lofty sense of their [illegible] ... They have a grievance ... [illegible] ... no doubt as to what properly ... the right and feeling of a citizen. It is that they should have ... representation in the apportionment ... [illegible] ... adopted ... on by others and it is the thing ... of people who take the ... [illegible] ... an opinion that a citizen as such has a right to be represented in the apportionment of offices ... without making the number of offices equal to the number of citizens so that there will be enough to go around ... that the people of the United States may be divided into classes and that each class should receive a pro rata share of the offices in satisfaction of its just claim. This is plainly the colored people of Rhode Island on the main ground that it may be seen that they are respected and deferred to as are other citizens. There is an old fashioned notion still cherished by some old fashioned people that the fact of citizenship in this country precludes the idea of the existence of classes; that a man is to be respected and deferred to because he is worthy of respect and deference, irrespective of any other consideration; that when a man becomes a citizen he is bound to keep that fact distinct from any class feeling of race, color, nationality or social position, and that no man has any claim whatever to office unless he can prove his superior fitness to hold it as compared with any other man. No greater curse could come upon this land of popular suffrage; no cause has already been prolific of more evil than the clannish idea of supporting a man for office because he represents the Irish or the Germans or the Scandinavians or the negroes. It is not to be wondered at that a small body of the latter have adopted ideas that they have heard on all sides as comprising the true theory of citizenship. The reproach is not that a convention of the colored people of Rhode Island should lay claim to a share of the spoils as one of the inalienable rights of citizenship and the special prerogatives of a class, but that they should have been taught this pernicious and destructive lesson by the selfish strife of two great parties which ought to have set a better example.

THE COAST TRADE.

The coasting trade of Oregon and Washington territory now in its infancy will soon be of great value. The regions surrounding the bays and rivers from the Coquille near the California line to the straits of Fuca are without exception rich in resources. In each settlers are rapidly coming in. Although all of these localities are fairly within Portland's commercial domain, the bulk of their trade goes to San Francisco. That city affords a market for lumber, which is the principal item of export, and the vessels which carry it out bring merchandise on their return trips. So long as the lumber districts along the coast sell their product to San Francisco so long will she get their trade. But lumber is not the only export. Potatoes are sent out in great quantities, hides by the thousands and great numbers of furs are sold, and half a dozen other articles of produce go with these to make up an export business which in the aggregate is great. If Portland will pay as much for these things as San Francisco and if she will sell goods in return as cheaply and deliver them at equal or lower rates, she will get the trade. Portland ought to make an effort to secure it. It now costs as much to ship merchandise from Portland to Yaquina bay (distance about 150 miles) as from San Francisco. A fast sailing coaster with auxiliary steam power could with profit do the business for a little more than half the present rates, and the establishment of such rates would attract to Portland a trade of many thousands of dollars annually which now goes to San Francisco. And this is true of various other localities along the coast as well. In the effort to reach out to Montana and Idaho we should not forget that equally good ground lies nearer home.

There is probably more monkey business in the Indian service than in any other department of the government. The trouble with Indian agents generally and at the San Carlos and Pine Ridge agencies particularly has impelled President Arthur to decide on a step toward the transfer of the Indians to the war department. This, however, can only be done by congress. The president will soon order Gen. Miles to make an investigation among the Indians, that all details of their treatment, needs and wants may be learned. The selection has fallen upon Miles because of his success in dealing with the Indians both in war and peace. In many instances where regular Indian inspectors have been dispatched on such missions they have either been deceived or have sold themselves to the persons whom they were sent to inspect. Gen. Miles, being proof against both cunning and corruption, is admirably fitted for this service, and may be relied upon to obtain accurate information.

Complaint comes from an experienced steamship commander that the government has pursued a stingy policy with regard to off-shore surveys along the coast of Washington territory. His grievance is given in another column. While it is true that the coast survey has neglected Puget Sound shipping interests, the matter is not so serious as the correspondent would have it appear. In 1869 the government issued in book form the Coast Pilot, which contains not only full written descriptions of every noticeable point on the Pacific shore but accurate lithographic views of them. These are unmistakable guides and can be obtained at the government agencies in Portland and San Francisco. Off-shore soundings, however, are meager and the deficiency should be remedied at once. What is reported relating to lighthouses shows the poorest [illegible]

MYSTERIOUS ASSASSINATION.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

WALLA WALLA, W. T., Oct. 30. Last week a man named Vincent, a resident of Grand Ronde valley, sold his ranch and horses and with a companion reached a point near No Warm Springs ... county. On Friday they camped out and while sitting near the fire about dark a stranger rode up, drew his revolver and commenced firing at them. One shot took effect in Vincent's left arm and another in his abdomen. His companion ran into the brush where their horses were, caught one and went for help from the Springs. The assassin made his escape and Vincent is not expected to live. A party of citizens are in pursuit of the would-be murderer, whose object is unknown except the robbery.

RAINBOW AT NIGHT.

CASCADE LOCKS, Oct. 28.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

A lovely and perfect rainbow by moonlight was seen here last evening at half-past six o'clock. Viewed from Whiskey Flat and looking westward the rainbow spanned the river immediately above the falls, the arch springing from either shore, while the river formed a chord to the arc. The colors were plainly discernible. A remarkable feature of this phantom-like scene was its apparent proximity to the point of observation, it appearing not more than a stone's throw distant. Among those sharing with me this strange sight were Capt. Darragh, Jas. Borthwick and Judge Otto Freeman.

AN IMPORTANT MATTER NEGLECTED.

SEATTLE, Oct. 30.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

In conversation with Captain H. G. Morse, commander of the Dakota, I was surprised to learn from him that there are no charts showing any reliable soundings ... of any service for thirty miles southward from Cape Flattery light. All sealers and all sailing vessels have to go close in in thick weather and try to get hold of soundings to find their position, and there are no soundings to guide them. The Flattery rocks and all the outlying dangers are so placed on the charts that no one could make them out. All above a mud bottom are all by the English on the Vancouver island coast, the only soundings to guide them, the English survey extending out from Vancouver island. Captain Morse was outspoken in condemnation of the stingy policy of the government, which here on Puget sound renders navigation dangerous, because the government has ordered the discharge of all assistant lighthouse keepers on Puget sound. One man cannot attend to cleaning his lamps, etc., in the day time and be up all night to wind the machinery that runs the lights and rings the fog bells. The only lighthouse keeper at Sandy point, near Seattle, is going to resign on account of this stingy policy. Commissioner Morse says, "instead of reducing the lighthouse force, it would be better to increase the brilliancy of the lights by making them electric lights, particularly at Cape Flattery." These are startling revelations and are such as should forth and landation from the traveling public and all owners of ships. Capt. Morse has been a commander at sea since he was 19 years of age, and his words should carry weight with them.

LOOKOUT.

THEY GOT TO $2,048.

A Portland Dry Goods Drummer Robbed of $2,048.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

WALLA WALLA, W. T., Oct. 31.—J. Gibson, a traveler for the Portland dry goods firm of Fleischner, Mayer & Co., was met last night at ... by two footpads, and the acquaintance they made proved quite expensive. They stopped his buckboard and required the road. While a ... covered him they went under his seat and demanded what money he had. The argument proved conclusive, as Gibson's revolver was in his valise, and he had to shell out to the amount of $2,048. The robbers then allowed him to mount his seat and drive off.

MECHANICS' PAVILION SKATING RINK.

Messrs. Stephens and Epperly have leased the above place and will open the same on Saturday evening next for skating. The proprietors will have the building well lighted, heated and decorated, and have engaged Mr. Chas. A. Booth, the renowned champion bicyclist, to give exhibitions of scientific bicycling every evening in connection with the skating. Mr. Booth is from Boston, Mass., and has just completed a tour round the world, having exhibited his skill in London, Paris, Cape of Good Hope, New Zealand and Australia, and is styled the Great Bicyclist Ducrow. Those who wish to enjoy good skating and see the true art of bicycling should not fail to visit the skating rink on the opening night.

The managers propose to make the skating rink a permanent place for healthful exercise and pleasure, and will rigidly exclude improper and offensive characters. They have bought a large number of best makes of roller skates, which will be rented at customary rates.

THE TARIFF COMMISSION.

WHAT THEIR INVESTIGATIONS HAVE DEVELOPED.

General Protection "All Round" Shown to be Impracticable.

New York Post.

The tariff commissioners have ceased taking testimony, and are now engaged in the task of digesting the vast mass of facts, opinions, arguments and suggestions which they have gathered since they commenced their sessions at Long Branch. That their investigation has been made [illegible] them in possession of all the information necessary to a thorough understanding of the workings of the present tariff [illegible] probably the commissioners themselves are [illegible] aware of that fact as any one. At the same time they have undoubtedly brought [illegible] them, if they are to be able to make valuable practical recommendations [illegible]. We should not be at all surprised if they should do so. We were of those who [illegible] from the commission at the start, because there was a great deal of evidence that it was not [illegible] in good faith. The majority in congress undoubtedly intended it as a device to gain time, and to enable them to postpone the duty of considering the tariff, and so creating it, and the selection of representatives of the protected industries as members of the commission was not calculated to create the public confidence in it.

But there are two facts which must have forced themselves on the attention of the commission, and which must have some effect upon their conclusions. One of these is that the public opinion in favor of a reduction of the tariff is very much stronger than it had been supposed to be. This has been shown in the testimony of the witnesses, other than manufacturers, who have appeared before the commission, and in the criticism and discussion in the public press upon the testimony elicited. Almost without important exception, the men who have come forward from the classes not directly benefited by the present tariff, or not seeking some special favors, have argued in favor of reduction. This feeling has been found particularly strong in the northwest, and the farmers have made a showing quite different from that which was expected of them. The second fact which must have impressed the commissioners is that the manufacturers, as a body, are very far from being united in favor of protection as now applied. Many of the witnesses engaged in manufacturing have pleaded with the commission, not for higher duties, not even for the maintenance of present rates, but for the release of imported raw materials from the duties now imposed. A respectable and influential body of manufacturers have demanded freer trade and have asserted their capacity, if relieved from the unnecessary and inequitable burdens laid on their respective trades, not only to furnish the home markets with cheaper goods, but to extend American commerce abroad. This is a fact which can hardly be ignored by the commission. It opens a way for them to perform their duty acceptably to the country, and without any reasonable ground of offense to sincere protectionists.

It has been announced by the chairman of the commission, and assumed by numerous persons appearing before it, and has been denied by no one, that the commission regarded itself as bound to preserve the general protective character of the tariff. We believe this to be a wholly false inference from the terms of the law creating the commission, by which alone it ought to be guided, and to which alone it has any right to refer for its authority and instruction. But granting that the commission shall adhere to this extra legal interpretation of its mission, it will still be obliged to face the question of what is, in reality, protection, and what, on the contrary, in the name of protection, is oppression, imposition, and usurpation. If the members of the commission will carefully and candidly seek a fair answer to this question, and embody it in their recommendations to congress they will find themselves able to propose a very general and considerable reduction of tariff rates and to secure a decided benefit for those manufacturing interests of the country which they suppose themselves called upon to protect. If they will seek, in the first place to determine as near as may be the actual disadvantages which any industry demanding a protective duty labors under as compared with foreign competitors—that is to say, the real difference in wages, the ratio of this difference to actual cost of production, the comparative efficiency of foreign and domestic labor, the value of our patent laws and the ingenuity in labor-saving machinery which these laws have fostered, the accessibility of the home market and the superior knowledge of its wants—if they will do this, they will find that in most cases the amount of protection needed to place the home industry on an equality with the foreign industry is very much smaller than is usually supposed or claimed. Then if the commissioners will, in the next place, seek the best means of securing the advantages required, and ascertain whether it may not be had by taking the duties off from raw material or from machinery, they will again find that the amount of duty actually needed on competing foreign goods will be notably diminished. In other words, if the commission will try in every case to secure the benefit which they think due to American industry, not by imposing unnecessary trammels on trade, but by giving it the greatest possible freedom, they will have a much more satisfactory result from their labors than they could get by following the suggestions of their numerous petitioners for protection.

After having done this, they will still find that protection "all around" is impracticable. They will discover that often a tax imposed for the aid of one industry is necessarily an impediment to another. In such cases they can only consider, first, the question of which is the more important of the two, and if, as is probable, the two are found to be about equally balanced, then the commissioners will be bound to let the interest of the consumer decide. They ought to let that interest decide in any event, but the narrowest adhesion to the protectionist theory cannot justify them in oppressing one industry to benefit another, to the general injury of the consumer. And, finally, we are confident that they will in no case be justified in imposing new taxes or increasing those already in existence.

THE DARWINIAN REVOLUTION.

An Estimate of the Great Naturalist's Influence on Modern Thought.

The London Pall Mall Gazette says: With the publication of Mr. Darwin's epoch-making work a new era began for almost every department of human thought. The world was convinced; the younger minds readily, the mass slowly and grudgingly, but convinced at last against its will. Indeed, it was curious to observe how much more spontaneously the new lights were followed even by those who had no special knowledge of biology, but whose minds were of the right type for appreciating the full value of the harmonious evolutionary system, than by those narrow specialists who could only think of the difficulties involved in the interpretation of this particular weedy flower, or that particular butterfly's wing. At first the seed prospered according to the previous preparation of the ground upon which it fell. Psychologists and philosophers trained in the school of Locke and Hume, of Hartley, Mill and Bain—nay, even of Kant and Fichte, or of Berkeley and of Coleridge—took kindly to the new doctrine. The most patient and minute of inductive workers made easy converts of the men whose own knowledge of inductive method was mainly gained in the wider fields of history, ethics and political philosophy; he was often longer in impressing the men who might have seemed more likely a priori to be won over by such careful and exhaustive collections of instances as those which make up the later volumes of his great connected series. Naturalists told more than specialists; the picked men of all classes were the first to come over to the new opinions.

Of course it was natural that Mr. Darwin's theory should produce a complete revolution in biology; no other science was so immediately and obviously affected by its implications. Almost all the elder and greater names came over at once; a few hesitated and hung back for a time, and finally were in their adhesion; a very small number held out, and still hold out, in scattered isolation for the older views. Among the younger thinkers the evolutionary theory conquered almost without a blow; the most eminent accepted it heartily in its Darwinian and Spencerian form; the less eminent often with such, more or less clumsy, modification, as were necessary to bring it into some artificial accord with their ineradicable prepossessions. Abroad, thinkers like Heckel, Baudry, Gray and Sachs, worked out its consequences through all the domains of animal and vegetable life. But it was not in biology alone that Mr. Darwin's seed bore great fruit. It sprang up like Jonah's gourd, till its branches overshadowed almost every region of scientific philosophic thought. In the sciences which deal with human life, especially, it introduced a totally new set of conceptions. Our ideas of ethics, of politics, of history, of sociology, were all largely modified by it, often even revolutionized. Man was no longer an archangel ruined, as Pascal called him, but a descendant of savages and of still lower ancestors, struggling slowly upwards by his own unaided efforts to such heights of knowledge and of disinterested work for right's sake as Charles Darwin himself so nobly exemplified for us.

To this new conception all our social and historical thinking had to be adapted. A new teacher had taught us how to know ourselves. His work inaugurated a fresh outburst of thinking and speculating on all such subjects. Sir John Lubbock and Mr. Tylor applied his doctrine to the early stages of man's history. Writers like Mr. Bagehot and Mr. Leslie Stephen employed it to elucidate politics and ethics. Professor Bain remodeled his psychology to suit the new ideas. Mr. Herbert Spencer inwove the survival of the fittest into the vast and all-embracing fabric of his system of Synthetic Philosophy. There was no science which was not tinctured in greater or less degree by the Darwinian spirit. Geologists and paleontologists applied it to the past history of the earth; ethnologists to the races of men, archaeologists to the interpretation of the oldest human relics, philologists to the recorded development of language; historians to the recorded events of European and Asiatic annals. Even in astronomy, it suggested new conceptions as to the life and duration of planets; in chemistry it led to fresh notions about the nature of organic compounds. Where it did not act directly it acted indirectly. Trickling and filtering down to the masses, it permeated even the daily press, the current of political and social ideas, the beliefs and opinions of the sects and the churches.

Those who themselves explicitly reject the Darwinian creed yet cannot possibly escape from many of its implications. It runs through almost all the best thought of our time; it tinges our utterances on public notions; it reappears under a hundred disguises in works on law and history, in politics, speeches and religious discourses, in artistic theories and vague social speculations. Our very novels and poems are full of it. If we try to think ourselves away from it we must think ourselves away entirely from our own age, away alike from Tennyson and [illegible], Tyndall and Huxley, from Maine and Galton, even from Freeman, Thompson, Balfour Stewart and Helmholtz, [illegible] from Bismarck [illegible] Darwin or by Darwinians [illegible] and remodeled by Darwinian ideas [illegible] behind in the race [illegible] of the Darwinian [illegible] of today [illegible] it.

And this change [illegible] to any other single [illegible] Darwin. [illegible] set all this mass of thought and art on seething and fermenting in every direction. It was fitting that the remains of so great a man should find their last resting place in Westminster Abbey, and Englishmen may reflect with pride that they lie there at last [illegible] Newton.

EXCERPTS.

[illegible]

Philadelphia Times: Secretary [illegible] at Washington [illegible] the treasury [illegible] New York [illegible]

Cincinnati Gazette: [illegible] McDowell's [illegible] campaign [illegible] united in drawing the long bow [illegible]

N. Y. Times: In addition to the extreme improbability of any scheme committing any branch of the government to a conspiracy to bribe a jury, we are confronted at the outset with the inconsistency of Mr. Brown, the principal affiant in this new case. He so stoutly averred, when the trial was ended and the jury discharged, that he knew of no attempt to corrupt any member of the jury. Now he swears with equal solemnity that he was approached by a man who tempted him with a bribe of $2500 if he would vote for the conviction of the defendants. Whatever may be true of the others, it is evident that Brown has not told the truth.

Salt Lake Tribune: The Mormons do not know how badly and scandalously they are governed by their local officials, so elected by themselves nominally but really by the church bosses. It will be our duty to enlighten them on these points, and show them wherein they will be better off and their load lightened by a change in administration. There has never been any system in Utah whereby the most scandalous jobberies and corruptions could be put a stop to; and we doubt if the people at large realize that it is in their power to require a change in all this, and to enforce it upon all their public officials. It will be the duty of the liberals to explain to them that they have full control in this if only they will determine to exercise it, and to show them how it may be done.

Washington Critic, Brady's own organ: It is by this time plainly apparent that the department of justice has overreached itself in its attempt to take charge of the jury-fixers. Mr. Brewster's tools, from Brewster Cameron down, seem to be made of weak timber. It probably never occurred to one of them that the attempt to get control of the inquiry, instead of facilitating the whitewashing process, would intensify public suspicion to a point where whitewash would be impossible or useless. The probability is that the seizure of the case by Brewster's agents will have no effect upon its progress. The men who have made the affidavits can go personally before the grand jury—unless Brewster should seize them, too—and it is difficult to see how the testimony is to be suppressed then.

A few days ago a large party of red men met to dedicate the council-house, which the Mississaugas have erected on their reservation in Canada. The Mississaugas, who now number only 250 persons, own 5000 acres of land, divided into fifty-acre farms, and all under cultivation; they maintain a church and a school, and have $80,000 in government funds. Thinking that their prosperity entitled them to the convenience of a council-house in which to transact their business, they erected a neat and comfortable building, and asked their friends to help them dedicate it. About 1500 members of the Six Nations and Indian delegates from remote points, were present. Songs, speeches, dances, the music of brass bands, and an abundant dinner made up the regular programme; and the afternoon closed with the formal adoption of the wife of Dr. P. E. Jones, chief of the Mississaugas. Mrs. Jones is a white lady, and her husband, a regularly educated physician, a gentleman of many accomplishments. She was received into the tribe under the name of "Wahmonqua," lady of the Morning.

SHARK FISHING.

How Some St. Louis Boys Hooked Them off Nantucket Island.

The hunting of the shark, by its excitement and colossal dimensions, almost corresponds to the noble chase of the buffalo or the grizzly on shore, and is an experience well worth traveling to Nantucket for. Every self-respecting tourist carries home a shark's jaw or some of the shark's curved teeth as trophies, and small boys have their wonderful pockets filled with assorted teeth and scraps of shark-skin, on which they sharpen their jack-knives as on so many whetstones. To catch a shark you stop the boat while out blue-fishing, and drop the line down in these shoal places off shore where the sharks chiefly lie in wait, but the blue-fishing company generally object to this and prefer to stay by their original spot. A better way, and one partaking more of the typical island flavor, is to sail down the harbor to the little peninsula of Wauwinet and, crossing the narrow strip of sand, re-embark in an old whale-boat, and, at a mile off shore, drop anchor at the favorite summer resort of the sharks.

"Hunting the shark is the nearest approach to sitting on a mountain to bob for a whale," since the Norcross boys present you with 200 feet of stout clothes-line and an iron meat hook for tackle and impale eight or ten perch on the long barbed hook for bait. When our nine lines were streaming out from the boat's side, and each one was braced for the coming struggle, first one female head and then a second was bent in pensive attitude by the gunwale. My own head was swimming, and sea and sky were rolling together, when a shout from the man in the bow drove every such notion and sensation away, and we all stood up and shouted with excitement. The rope came slowly in, and soon the big fish was floundering on the surface, churning the waters white all around, and drenching us with the spray. The Norcross boy seized a club, his brother held the line, after a succession of blows on his pointed nose, the shark was hauled aboard, its jaws wide open and its ravenous career ended.

After this first catch there was a subdued excitement all around, and no one thought of the groundswell again. The Harvard prize man announced that he thought he had a bite, and, hauling in his line cautiously, found a little yellow crab clawing at the trembling bait. The shout of laughter was drowned by my own shriek of victory, as there came a jerk from the other end of my rope. It may be cruel and murderous sport, but there is a savage excitement in waging war against wild beasts and pulling in that shark was equal to holding a runaway horse. With braced feet, and taking it hand over hand, the line gradually shortened and the body of the shark was seen darting around in the water. "Look out or you'll land him in your lap," cried the yachtsman, "and if he comes in, some of us will have to get out." The Stoll boys danced, the men shouted, and the ladies stood up and shrieked in chorus with me, while the shark lashed the waters with his mighty tail and sent the spray all over us and the boat seats. The Norcross boys took the line and drew my prize in, hammered him on the head with a club and putting another hook in his back pulled him over and stretched him out. There he lay, his nose at one side of the great whaleboat and his tail hanging over the other, nine feet long from tip to tip, a good [illegible] a fish, weighing 800 pounds.—Cor. Globe-Democrat.

A Burial at Sea.

Melancholy as death must always be, there is something especially sad about its occurrence on shipboard far out at sea. On land the bereaved survivors may at least have the satisfaction of seeing the body of their loved one deposited in a grave which their affection can [illegible] keep green, and which may often prove to [illegible] for their footsteps in coming years. But [illegible] the great [illegible] dead may be committed to the waves [illegible] a family [illegible]

For several weeks [illegible] from the Pacific coast [illegible] has been generally accepted [illegible] gentleman with long and accurate memory, has called the attention of [illegible] to a cargo shipped from this latter port exceeding in value the [illegible] of any other craft. The Oregon vessel for which this honor has been claimed is the British ship Wallacetown, 1565 tons, which sailed from Astoria August 20th for Liverpool with a cargo valued at [illegible] as follows:

	Quantity.	Value.
Canned salmon, cases	[illegible]	[illegible]
Flour, bbls	2,650	12,117
Total value		$190,112

The Bulletin says: The vessel from San Francisco to which our attention has been called is the four masted American ship Ocean King, [illegible] tons, now on her way hence to Liverpool. In 1878 this vessel started on a trip hence for New York, leaving here on December [illegible] of that year. She is a large carrier. There is probably not a dozen vessels in the merchant sailing fleet that will take more cargo than the Ocean King. On her last trip from this port she took [illegible] tons wheat, besides other cargo. She is good for 3750 to 4000 tons cargo. On the occasion of her departure for New York, about four years ago, she took 78 tons wool, [illegible], 200 flasks quicksilver, 1500 cases canned salmon, [illegible], 64,190 gallons wine and other cargo, the whole valued at $425,816. It is perhaps well to remark that this is our own valuation at the time of clearance. There are no sworn values of cargoes between domestic ports filed at the custom house, and hence the necessity of private valuation. The wool alone by the above vessel was probably worth over $300,000, while the remainder of the cargo would easily carry the total to $425,816.

The fact that a difference exists of nearly 900 tons in favor of the San Francisco vessel will tend to mitigate any grief felt in being obliged to withdraw our boast.

Industrial Items.

The opening of two oil clothing factories in East Portland during the past six months should have the effect of keeping in the neighborhood of $50,000 in circulation at home, which has hitherto been sent to San Francisco and east. A local wholesale house has secured the entire product of one factory and we learn finds ready sale for all they can turn out with present facilities. About 10 hands are constantly employed at present, which number will be increased 100 per cent next year.

An exchange says: As far as quality is concerned both Rangoon and Patna rice are superior to the Carolina and Louisiana rice, for the reason that they contain a larger per cent of nutritious matter and less water; but Carolina is preferred by Americans, one reason being that it is prettier, being more pearly looking, but the preference is mainly attributable to prejudice. This prejudice is strong enough, however, to cause American rice, when selling at [illegible] cents, to drive foreign rice, which can be sold at [illegible] cents, out of the country.

More than one-third of the wine produced in the world is derived from France. The extent of land under vine cultivation is a further evidence of the importance of the wine to the prosperity of that country. The average production of wine is estimated at [illegible] gallons per acre. One twenty-fifth part of the total area of France is appropriated to wine production, and the number of acres under vines which a hundred years ago were put under 4,000,000 now exceeds 6,000,000 acres; and this notwithstanding the fact that 1,000,000 acres of vines have recently been destroyed by the phylloxera. The land, however, has fallen into the hands of a smaller number of holders, for, although there are now 1,000,000 more acres under vine cultivation than there were a century ago, the number of the proprietors of vineyards, which in 1829 was 2,163,[illegible], has fallen in 1879 to [illegible].

The Boston Commercial Bulletin says: The price of Para rubber has taken another rocketty jump upward, and fine Para grades are now held at $1 17, against [illegible] a month ago and [illegible] in October, 1881, and [illegible] in 1879. The advance within the past ten days has been 10@12c per pound, and has taken nearly everybody by surprise. Some of the largest manufacturers freely admit that they recently refused to buy rubber for delivery this month at 95c, and that they cannot purchase the same grade to-day below $1 15. This last advance has not been accompanied by large transactions, but is principally due to the sanguine expectations of speculative holders. That there has been an enormous increase in the consumption of this material not only for boots and shoes, but for clothing and other goods, during the past few years is well known. The use of gossamer cloaks by ladies has become very general, and the highest grade of rubber is invariably employed in their manufacture. A new rubber district has lately been opened up in the vicinity of the village of La Plata, south of Panama, which will undoubtedly give a new impetus to the trade on this coast.

IDLE MINNESOTA MILLS.

Their Owners Compelled to go to Kansas for Wheat.

From the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press.

The year has been a trying one for the Minneapolis millers, who have to report a wide circuit of country for wheat and struggle with the difficulties of inferior raw material. Many of the mills have been idle for considerable periods, and all of them have had a constant fight to maintain the quality of their flour and keep up the reputation of their brands, with the poor wheat of last year's crop. These difficulties are fairly reflected in the decrease of the business done in the past year as compared with 1880-81. In spite of the increase of milling facilities, the aggregate product of flour has fallen off from 2,990,368 to 2,34[illegible],667, or [illegible] barrels. This is less remarkable than the decrease in the direct export trade, which, after rising from 769,442 barrels in 1880 to 1,278,[illegible] in 1881, fell to [illegible] in the year from September, 1881, to September, 1882. In this case, however, the decrease in the supply of raw material was aided as a cause of the decline by the general falling off in the European demand for American food products.

With the most favorable conditions of production, the export of flour from Minneapolis to Europe must have fallen off, as the export of wheat from all the American ports to Europe has fallen off. Perhaps the most interesting feature in this milling review however, is the showing made of the importation of southwestern wheat into Minneapolis. The partial failure of the territory adjacent to the mills to furnish enough wheat to keep them going, [illegible] a needy search for other sources of supply. The experiment of bringing California wheat to Minneapolis was first tried, but without hope of results. The mills then began to bring wheat from Kansas and neighboring states, with such success that the trade has grown to large proportions. Most people will be astonished to learn that the Minneapolis mills have bought more than 1,000,000 bushels of wheat in Kansas City the present summer.

It seems to be the opinion in Minneapolis that the movement of wheat from Kansas is only temporary, and that it will stop whenever good crops in the northwest raise the home supply to the normal figure. This does not follow at all. If the Minneapolis mills can grind Kansas wheat profitably this year they can do it any year, and the milling facilities at St. Anthony's Falls are capable of expansion to embrace all the grain grown in the southwest as well as the northwest. If Kansas wheat makes better flour by mixing with our hard wheat, here is the place to grind it.

Dr. Lamson had his life insured for [illegible] and prior to his arrest on the charge of poisoning his brother-in-law only one premium had been paid. Immediately before his conviction, Dr. Lamson assigned the policy absolutely to W. A. Mills, the solicitor by whom he was defended, and directed that the money be used to cover the balance of the costs of the defense. Some years ago the house of lords decided that under circumstances like those of the Lamson case a policy was void, even though the policy provided that [illegible] at the hands of justice shall not [illegible]. In spite of this, however, the company has decided to pay the full amount of the policy, although there seems to be no doubt that they might have successfully resisted payment.

Louis Gurado, an Italian fruit vender, who kept a stand at Second avenue and Fourth street, was bitten on Saturday by a tarantula and was nearly frightened to death. He was in the act of cutting a banana from a bunch on his stand, when the insect, which was evidently hidden on the stalk of the bunch, stung him on his right thumb. Gurado struck at the insect and killed it. Soon after he felt a sharp pain in his thumb, began to feel dizzy and uncomfortable, and in a few minutes fell on the pavement, like a man under the influence of liquor. His hand and arm swelled to nearly twice their natural size, and the swelling increased and communicated to his face and neck. His wife, who was with him at the stand, became alarmed and cried out that her husband was dying. A crowd collected about the man, and this attracted a policeman. An ambulance was summoned, and Gurado was sent to Bellevue hospital. When he arrived at the hospital the swelling had already begun to subside. A cooling salve was applied to the wounded thumb, and yesterday morning, having fully recovered, he was allowed to go to his home.—N. Y. Times, Oct. 9th.

One of the most remarkable of the great canal projects now occupying the attention of engineers is that of uniting the North Sea with the Mediterranean. Like most great enterprises of this character, it is old in conception, dating back, it is claimed, to the beginning of the Christian era. Four years ago it took a definite shape in a plan for a canal from Marseilles to Lyons and thence to Dunkirk. During the present year a substitute was suggested in the form of a canal from Bordeaux to Narbonne. This latter plan, though possessing obvious advantages in point of distance, the route being much shorter and less expensive than the other, yet on the other hand, is less attractive as an enterprise of vast scope, since it would merely connect the Bay of Biscay with the Mediterranean, cutting off the doubling of the Spanish peninsula. Whichever project is selected, it would be remarkable if the earth's surface is so cut up that a ship may proceed from Bombay to St. Petersburg, solely through inland waters, as it would be able to do by using the Suez, the French and the Danish canals, the three being designed for the largest commercial vessels.—N. Y. Sun.

Editors are continually bothered by the applications of people who wish to have inserted in "your valuable paper" notices of the comings and goings in, the downsittings and uprisings of persons of whom they never heard, and in whom, they have reason to believe, the general public takes no languid interest. If he declines to publish the bit of personal intelligence that is offered him, he is [illegible] abused by the individual who tenders it; while if he prints it he knows he is throwing away valuable space. How to avoid such consequences is a problem over which many editors have grown gray without solving it. A Connecticut editor, however, has hit upon a plan which is worth a recommendation to his brethren of the quill. He received the following paragraph the other day: "Mr. and Miss Amelia Terry of Pawtucket, R. I., are in town, the guests of Miss Flora Perry. Please insert the above in your paper." With this request, although he never heard of the persons mentioned, the editor complied, and even went further and dignified the announcement by a big head, as follows: "Glad They Are Here!" But there is room for doubt whether the people thus singularly honored were pleased, and it is probable that the editor has not since been troubled with the requests to publish similar items of "news."—Boston Journal.
